"Peace with Axis or Utter Ruin"

—HESS'S OFFER TO BRITAIN.

A VIRTUAL ultimatum that Britain should make peace with the Axis or suffer "utter destruction" and "permanent subjection," was brought to Britain by Rudolf Hess on May 10, 1941.

Mr. Eden, after explaining in the House of Commons yesterday that the facts were held up for so long because the Government "thought that a certain amount of perplexity about the events would be unhealthy for Germany," issued the full story in a written reply.

Hess said that his aim was to convince responsible persons that, since England could not win, her wisest course was to make peace at once. The proposals could be considered only on the understanding that they were negotiated with an English Government other than the present one." The Fuehrer would not negotiate with Churchill and his colleagues.

"I am on a mission of humanity. The Fuehrer does not want to defeat England, and wants to stop fighting," he said, adding that he had come without the knowledge of Hitler. He stressed the enormous power of Germany in the air and in U-boats, which later, he stated, would grow much greater. He affirmed the certainty of England's defeat by blockade, if not very quickly, in the course of 2 or 3 years. He gave his word of honour that the Fuehrer had never entertained any designs against the British Empire, nor had he ever aspired to world domination. The Fuehrer would sincerely regret the collapse of the British Empire. Hitler had declared to him, as recently as May 3, that he had no oppressive demands to make on England.

CHIEF POINTS

Main points of the solution which Herr Hess put forward were as follows:—

(1) That Germany should be given a free hand in Europe.

(2) That England should have a free hand in the British Empire, except that the ex-German colonies should be returned to Germany.

(3) That Russia should be included in Asia, but that Germany had certain demands to make of Russia, which would have to be satisfied, either by negotiation or as the result of war. There was, however, no truth in the rumours that the Fuehrer contemplated an early attack on Russia.

(4) That the British should evacuate Iraq.

Hess said that his flight was intended to give Great Britain a chance of opening conversations without loss of prestige. If this chance were rejected, it would be the Fuehrer's duty to destroy Great Britain utterly, and to keep the country after the war in a state of permanent subjection.

The "terms" were re-stated by Hess in a signed document dated June 10.

It was throughout made clear to Hess that there was no question whatever of any talks or negotiations of any kind taking place with Hitler or his Government.

Hess has been dealt with as a prisoner of war since his arrival in Great Britain, and will so continue to be treated till the end of the war.

Heating of Dublin Schools

A reply from the Minister for Supplies to a letter from the Irish Women Workers' Union requesting that the matter of school heating should be given special consideration this winter, stated:—Regarding the heating of Dublin schools, arrangements in connection therewith are a matter for the school managers and for the Department of Education. This Department is concerned only where application is made for the grant of permits for the purchase of rationed fuels. In this connection I am to state that applications have been received in respect of a number of schools, and permits have already been granted authorising the purchase of next winter's turf requirements.

SOVIETS NOW IN SIGHT OF KIEV

CONTINUING their steady advance on a 900-mile front, Soviet forces yesterday captured nearly 1,000 places. Advanced columns are within sight of Kiev. Dnepropetrovsk is only 13 miles away. Roslavl is expected to fall at any moment, and a wedge driven into the German defences between Smolensk and Velizh places German communications here in dire peril, Reuter reports from Moscow.

The port of Anapa, 30 miles N.W. of Novorossisk, has been captured after fierce fighting, Moscow states. The German News Agency last night reported its evacuation.

Smolensk is being attacked by one of the most daring pincer movements undertaken since Stalingrad, Reuter's Special Correspondent cables from Moscow. While General Popov's army is hammering at the gates of Roslavl, S.E. of Smolensk, General Sokolovsky is driving a big wedge between Smolensk and Velizh to the north-west. This wedge is moving forward on a front of over 20 miles. The heavy fortifications on the eastern arc around Smolensk are outflanked and the rear communications of the German forces defending the fortress are now in the utmost peril.

One column of Sokolovsky's forces is only 22 miles from the Smolensk-Vitebsk railway.

Meanwhile troops, under General Yeremenko, are pushing down the Dvina river from Velizh, effectively pinning down the German forces at Vitebsk and preventing them from giving effective aid to the Smolensk garrison.

The fall of Roslavl is expected at any moment.

COUNTER-ATTACKS

The drive towards the Dnieper, further south, is continuing with full force. Battles are taking place along the railway, less than 20 miles from Dnepropetrovsk; the Germans are counter-attacking with considerable tank forces.

General Rokossovsky's forces, advancing on Kiev on a 100-mile front, are already within sight of the great Ukraine capital, only 20 miles away. From north and south the Kiev garrison faces the danger of being outflanked. The Germans are also being forced back under great pressure beyond the Desna town of Chernigov.

Capture of Chernigov has increased the threat to Gomel, 60 miles to the north, and has thus driven the first gap into the road to Minsk, in the heart of White Russia. The battle for the liberation of White Russia now enters an active stage. The German garrison made tremendous efforts to hold Chernigov, and fought desperately to the last man.

The liquidation of the German bridgehead in the Kuban is being pushed ahead, Reuter reports. The German line is now only 26 miles long, and their hold is weakening hourly.

KUBAN PRESSURE

Increased Soviet pressure against the German covering forces along the whole front of the Kuban bridgehead was reported from Berlin. "A Soviet landing attempt in the German rear was detected in time and the landing forces were annihilated," the German News Agency said last night.

Captain Sertorius, the German military commentator, stated last night that the Red Army is attacking the German positions in the Smolensk area with most powerful forces, and a pincer movement is taking shape. Further south, in the Roslavl sector, he added, Soviet pressure was greatly increasing, and was being met in "elastic defence warfare."

The Soviet communiqué, after announcing the capture of Anapa, gave details of advances in the directions of eight German bases. Towards Dnepropetrovsk and Kiev gains of 12 miles were claimed, and 15 in the direction of Gomel.

Wexford Bird Refuge as Tourist Resort

The Great Saltee Island, four miles off the Wexford coast and the home of millions of sea birds, has been bought by Mr. Prince Neale, of Orwell road, Rathgar, Dublin. The island contains much rich tillage land, and, since the war started, wheat and other crops have been grown there. Mr. Neale will continue the tillage operations, but meanwhile he is planning to turn the island into a holiday resort. A first class hotel will be erected and a scheme is being developed whereby tourists landing at Rosslare from the cross-Channel mail steamers will be able to travel to the island in amphibious "ducks" or be flown there by helicopter.

Mr. Neale, who farms extensively in Co. Wexford, where he grew upwards of 200 acres of wheat this year; is fond of birds, and intends to safeguard the island as a bird sanctuary. It is estimated that from March to July every year two million sea birds, of nearly thirty varieties, breed in the crevices of the three hundred feet high cliffs.

Empire Premiers to Meet

A meeting early next year of all the Empire Prime Ministers was forecast in the House of Commons yesterday by Mr. Churchill.

He told Mr. Dugdale (Labour, West Bromwich) that such a meeting was regarded as "an important and immediate objective," and likely to be more acceptable than an Imperial Conference.

Free German Committee in Russia

According to Pravda, a "Union of German officers," composed of prisoners of war, has been formed in Russia, and has appealed to German commanders to overthrow Herr Hitler. The text of their appeal is given with the facsimile signatures of the German officers who signed it.

"A conference of German officers, consisting of over 100 delegates from five prisoner of war camps, was held in Moscow on September 11th and 12th," Pravda says. "It fully endorsed the aims of the Free Germany National Committee formed last July and decided to join it.

"Three German generals captured at Stalingrad in January have been elected to the Committee of the Union. They are General von Seidlitz, Commander of the 151st Army Corps, who was unanimously elected President; Lieut.-General von Daniels, Commander of the 366th Infantry Division, and Major-General Korfes, Commander of the 295th Infantry Division

"The Committee also includes Major-General Latmann, Commander of a tank division; Colonel van Hauven, Chief of the Signals Service of the German 6th Army, and Colonel Steidle, Commander of the 767th Grenadier Regiment."—(Reuter.)

Harvesting Outlook Improved

Improved harvesting conditions have revived hopes of farmers who saw the produce of one of the best tillage years gradually deteriorating as a result of heavy rains. A fortnight's fine weather would materially help to secure a reduction in the admixture of barley in Irish bread by ensuring a sound wheat yield.

In some parts of the country harvesting has been hampered by lack of sufficient machinery, but the arrival of a certain number of reapers and binders has eased the situation, and then need for speed is so great that workmen who normally would receive 36s. per week are getting as much as £1 per day as harvesters.

Particularly in the south, members of the Defence Forces have been given special early leave, and are assisting farmers.

British Town-Planning Delays

Strong criticism of the British Government's delay in announcing its town-planning proposals was voiced in the House of Lords yesterday by Lord Latham. Who jettisoned the legislation that was ready almost two years' ago, he asked.

His remarks followed a statement by Lord Snell that he hoped the Scott report—which deals with the development of rural England, agriculture, housing and industry—would be ready within the next two or three weeks.

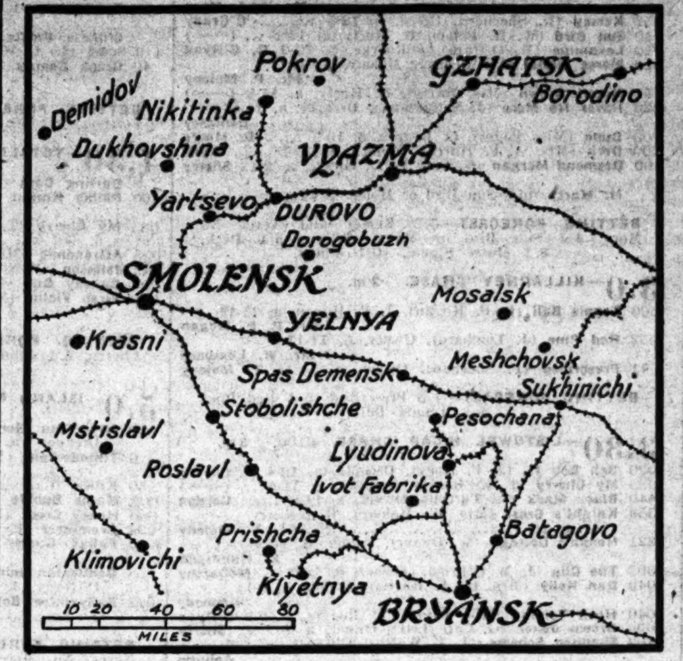
Outside London, said Lord Latham, speculation was going on and land prices were rising because local authorities were unable to publish their plans.

Banning of English Newspaper

Mr. Reakes (Ind., Wallasey) asked the British Minister of Information yesterday, in the House of Commons, what representations he proposed to make with regard to the banning of the Sunday Dispatch in Eire by the Irish censor, and would he make it clear that such interference with the British Press is resented in Britain?

Mr. Thurtle, Parliamentary Secretary:—"The Minister is not proposing to make any representations. The Ministry of Information is not concerned with the actions of the Eire censor."

German bread ration has been increased by 400 grammes (approximately 14 ounces) per rationing period (four weeks), the German News Agency announced yesterday. The increase is "due to the excellent harvest this year."



Beveridge Scheme in Danger

SIR. WM. BEVERIDGE said at Hornsey, London, last night: "I hope that you'll ask for not less than my plan. I've done all the cutting down that is needed. But, if you don't take care, you may find it cut down still more—in adequacy, in unity, and by concessions to sectional interests. Of the six new features of my plan, the Government, at present, have accepted only three."

Asked "Will the plan be adopted in Britain," he replied: "It is up to you. If you want social security you must work for it politically; not wait for it to drop into your mouths. Working politically means making plain to members of Parliament what you want. A Government which makes heavy weather of my plan, or whittles it down through timidity, departmentalism or tenderness to special interests will certainly fail on the harder jobs that lie behind.

"If a Coalition Government is too conservative to give you not less than my plan it certainly will not be adventurous enough to give you full employment or to redistribute industry and population and make an end of slums. You will be better off without a Coalition, but I hope you won't be put to that choice yet."

Sir William said his plan, in the first year, would cost the taxpayer only £86,000,000—equivalent of 6d. in income tax and 1d. on beer. Afterwards the tax contribution rose, but other national expenditure arising out of the war would be falling.

Spain's Blue Division An Obstacle

Mr. Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, answering questions in the House of Commons yesterday about Great Britain's relations with Spain, told Mr. George Strauss (Lab., Lambeth N.) that, while some complaints had been remedied, Sir Samuel Hoare, in his recent interview with General Franco, drew attention to matters which still required attention if General Franco's proclaimed policy of equal treatment of belligerents was to be carried out. Among the questions raised was the position of the "Blue Division," which was regarded as a serious obstacle to cordial Anglo-Spanish relations so long as it remained in Russia.

Mr. Eden added that he had no information to show that the Spanish ports were available to German submarines.

"We look to the Spanish Government for an early improvement in the situation," he said.

Asked by Mr. Hewlett (C., Manchester Exchange) to define Britain's present attitude towards the Spanish occupation of Tangier, Mr. Eden said that under the modus vivendi of 1941—which the British Government had always regarded as provisional—British rights in the zone had been and were fully safeguarded. Meanwhile, the British Government had requested the Spanish Government to put an end to the un-neutral activities by German nationals against British interests, and to ensure the maintenance of strict neutrality.

Livestock in the North

Mr. John Green, the B.C.C.'s Agricultural Liaison Officer, has arrived in Northern Ireland to give a series of talks to farmers.

He has made a tour of the six counties, and has reached the following conclusions:

The quality of livestock is shocking and the milk yield deplorable.

More good dairy shorthorns and more good beef shorthorns are required; at present the two types are being mixed with evil results; store cattle are deteriorating in quality.

There has, he says, been an enormous increase in mechanisation, but farmers are not making full use of silage for the abundance of grass at their disposal. A much longer grazing season would be feasible if direct seeding were practised.

Northern Ireland's reputation for packing and grading of eggs stood high; pork and poultry also were good, while Northern Ireland seed potatoes held top place in the estimation of British farmers.

Petrol Wasted in Turf Haulage

According to lorry owners there is a great wastage of petrol in connection with turf haulage. Lorries which travel up to Dublin return empty, and, at the same time, quantities of goods are lying in the railway yards awaiting transport. This anomaly will become greater as the railways become increasingly busy with the haulage of the crops.

Representations have been made to the Government on this matter by various bodies during the past six months, but without success.

A further saving of petrol might be made by having petrol pumps within easy reach of the turf dumps. Lorry owners who keep their petrol at their own yards, sometimes four or five miles distant from the dumps, waste from one-half to one gallon of petrol in going to their yards to refuel.

Fresh Allied Offensive in New Guinea

AUSTRALIAN paratroops, striking the first blow in General MacArthur's fresh New Guinea offensive, have captured Kaipit, 60 miles north of Lae.

As the Australians landed at Kaipit U.S. Liberators struck at Wewak and Madang, the remaining Japanese bases in the area. The Kaipit garrison made several counter-attacks, but were driven back. The village is 200 miles south-east of Wewak and 70 miles from Madang. Aircraft and fuel dumps at both Wewak aerodromes were set on fire.

The Australian troops who occupied Lae have been put to work clearing up the débris. The haul of booty here is the biggest yet made in the war against Japan.

Liberators of the Tenth United States Air Force attacked without loss railway yards at Wetlet, thirty miles north-west of Mandalay, destroying the main line, sidings and rolling stock, says yesterday's communiqué from United States Air Force H.Q.

American fighters shot down 17 out of 50 Japanese 'planes which raided the U.S. air base H.Q. in China on Monday.

NEW COMMAND

The vast territory to be commanded by Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten as C.-in-C., South-East Asia, is disclosed for the first time in advices reaching me from India, writes Reuter's observer on Far Eastern affairs. His command extends over French Indo-China, Siam, Malaya, Sumatra and Burma, and at sea ranges over the Bay of Bengal, the Indian Ocean and the Arabian Sea.

JAPANESE PLAN

Criticism of the measures outlined by General Tojo, the Japanese Prime Minister, yesterday was voiced by the Tokyo newspaper, Mainichi Shimbuns, quoted last night by the German Overseas News Agency. Tojo referred to what he called drastic measures to meet a grave position.

"The delay in drawing up the measures now resolved is to be regretted," the Mainichi Shimbun was quoted as saying. "The Japanese people had become tired of hearing that they were faced with a grave national peril." Amazement was expressed that the measures were presented as new decisions, as it was generally assumed that these had been put into practice long ago, or at least begun.

The main points of the new measures are:—Concentration of the arms industry, air force expansion; self-sufficiency in food; complete mobilisation, including women and elderly persons; air defences, and special measures for the protection of Government buildings and factories in Tokyo and other big cities; increased taxation and saving.—(Reuter.)

When Italy Will Be Free

—BADOGLIO.

An official statement by Marshal Badoglio was broadcast from Algiers last night as follows:—

1. The King and the Royal House are the expression of the will of the Italian people;

2. The Italian people does not want to have anything more to do with Fascism, be it called Republican or Monarchist;

3. The armed forces have sworn loyalty to the King and obey the King exclusively;

4. The Italian people have not betrayed the Germans. They have been betrayed by the Nazi-Fascist conspiracy. The peasants and the population of Northern Italy will not forget the tens of thousands of their sons which were sent to die in Russia, in the African desert, in the sole interest of Germany;

5. The behaviour of the Germans after the armistice has made the action of the Italian people inevitable, and has rendered deeper still the abyss between Italy and Germany.

6. The sooner the Germans have been chased out of Italy the sooner Italy will be free;

7. The refugees, the peasants, the workers, all classes, under the leadership of the King and of his Government, will together build the future destiny of Italy;

9. Italy will surge from this tragedy stronger than ever, if all Italians remain united and confident of victory.

Marshal Badoglio, attacking Signor Mussolini's policy, said: "Mussolini has dragged Italy into new wars which no Italian wanted and were not warranted by the hate of any Italians."

Referring to the armistice, he said: "The conditions are hard, but we must not forget that we have been beaten. On the other hand, a certain number of clauses have already been altered by the evolution of the situation. Our armed reaction to the German aggression has brought us nearer to co-operation with the Allies."—(Reuter.)

Dingle Air Crash Letters

In the British House of Commons yesterday Captain Crookshank, Postmaster-General, told Mr. Hewlett (C., Manchester Exchange) that about 26,000 cards and letters from British prisoners of war in the Far East were destroyed and about 11,000 salvaged in the recent 'plane disaster in Ireland.

Germans Fall Back to Corner of Corsica

THE Germans in Corsica were reported yesterday to have withdrawn to the north-east corner of the island.

Last night's French communiqué from Allied H.Q., North Africa, stated:—

"Regular French troops and patriot detachments are continuing to harass the enemy, who is withdrawing from the Bonifacio-Portovecchio region towards the north-eastern corner of the island.

"In the past few days the Germans have left more than a thousand dead on the battlefield. Several hundred prisoners fell into our hands. In the Levie sector the Germans were obliged to withdraw with heavy losses after violent fighting. An American Commando unit is fighting by the side of the patriots and regular French troops."

Giving the first eye-witness description of the Allied landing, Radio France (Algiers) said last night: "On September 15 two French destroyers which put into the port had on board a battalion of French shock troops and the new authorities for the island.

"Contact with Corsicans had been kept up, so that on the eve of the armistice, 15,000 were already armed by the Allies and only waiting for battle."

With French regular troops from North Africa and Corsican detachments now holding the whole of the western part of the island, American Liberators and British and Canadian Wellingtons from North-West Africa are attacking the Germans' remaining line across the Corsican channel.

Liberators, brought from England to reinforce the North-West African forces, heavily raided Bastia, on the north-east coast, the principal Corsican port left to the Germans, as well as Leghorn, on the Italian mainland.

The Liberators sank several ships, and Wellingtons were in action against a sea convoy off Nice, the nearest French port to Corsica.

Corsicans now hold Sartene and Corte, two principal towns on the main road running north-south through the centre of the island. In the north they hold St. Florent, six miles from Bastia.

Britain Will Not Annex Sicily

MR. EDEN, British Foreign Secretary, replying to the war debate yesterday in the House of Commons, said that the Government had examined the problem of relief for the sufferings, particularly of children, in the occupied countries. "The truth is, that when you embark on anything of this kind you cannot find a point at which you can help. This matter has been looked at by the War Cabinet many times. We have tried to find schemes many times, and we have reluctantly come to the conclusion that the only thing that can be done for these people is to speed the final victory.

"It is not true that A.M.G.O.T. (Allied Military Government in Occupied Territories) has maintained Fascist officials in office. All the leading Fascists who have been in charge of the divisions have been got rid of, and A.M.G.O.T. has done what it could to choose men who locally had a certain amount of popularity."

Speaking of the reasons for the use of the Carabinieri, he said:—"If we had not used the Carabinieri, we should have had to employ at least 10,000 British troops to do their job not so well."

Mr. Ivor Thomas (Lab., Keighley) suggested that Mr. Eden's statement might encourage the idea that Great Britain intended to annex Sicily, and Mr. Eden replied:—

"There is not the least intention of annexing Sicily while the present military situation prevails, and while we are using this island for the preparation for the advance to Naples it is quite impossible to allow free rein to the various political parties there. The regulations are not tightly applied. There is a great deal of political discussion, and there is freedom of the Press to say what they like about each other, and even about A.M.G.O.T."

PRACTICAL TASK

The task of A.M.G.O.T., he pointed out, was, in the main, not political, but practical. They came into cities utterly devastated by aerial bombardment, probably without water or light, and with dead lying about the streets, without food, and with very little transport. Amgot had to try to restore something in the nature of normal life to these cities. They had to try to prevent outbreaks of epidemics, such as typhus. Mr. Eden said it was not intended that the A.M.G.O.T. organisation should be permanent.

"We do not want to have this burden of administration on our hands. The sooner we can find an Italian administration which can take this burden off our hands the better we shall be pleased. The same is true of other countries. It is our intent—at the very earliest possible moment after landing—that administration shall be turned over to the friendly liberated Government with whom we are in relation, or to some authority representing that country."

Asked if it would apply to France, Mr. Eden replied: "Yes, certainly."

Speaking of relations with the U.S.S.R., Mr. Eden said:—"I have always been one who believed and believes intensely in close and intimate relations between this country and Russia. I believe them to be essential to the defeat of the enemy and to lasting peace when this struggle is over. We shall have our differing points of view, but broadly the interests of this country, of the British Commonwealth, of the United States, of the U.S.S.R. and of China are the same, because broadly our interests do not clash and all our interests are in peace.

"We want to build up a peace system that will endure and a peace system backed by the necessary authority to prevent the recurrence of these scourging wars.

Fight Expected for Tipperary Vacancy

By Our Political Correspondent.

With the holding of the Fianna Fail Ard Fheis next week the lull which has prevailed over the political arena since the recent elections will give place to renewed activities. This, by the way, is the first time since the war started that this hitherto annual event has been held.

It may be taken as a hint that, notwithstanding the Taoiseach's warning that the danger is not yet passed, the party managers think differently. Moreover, there is to be a by-election as soon after the Dail meets as possible. On October 20 there will be a motion on the Order Paper for the issue of a writ for an election to fill the vacancy in Tipperary caused by the death of a Fianna Fail deputy, Mr. Martin Ryan, who died on July 22, just a month after he had been elected.

The policy of not holding by-elections when a vacancy occurs, which was observed since the beginning of the present emergency, is now being dropped, and the contest in Tipperary is already engaging an amount of interest. On the figures of the first preference votes at the June election, the seat would seem to be fairly safe for Fianna Fail, but I am informed that Fine Gael will certainly contest it. Whether Labour and the Farmers will put up candidates is not yet indicated. The total Fianna Fail vote at last election was 25,166 and Fine Gael 16,450. Labour got over 7,000 votes, and Farmers over 5,000.

There is some party activity locally, but so far no dates have been fixed for the selection of candidates.

Princess Elizabeth's Majority

New legislation mentioned by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons, yesterday, and asked for by the King, will amend the provisions of the Regency Act to remove an anomaly, the Press Association Court Correspondent understands.

Under the terms of the Act, Princess Elizabeth, heiress-presumptive to the Throne, would come of age on her 18th birthday (April 21, 1944), as far as the question of succession arises. But she remains a minor until 21 in relation to service as a Counsellor of State.

The new legislation, to which it is considered there will be no opposition, will remedy this contradiction by enabling the Princess to serve as a Counsellor of State after next April.

Kesselring's Food Order

Rome Radio last night broadcast an Order issued by Kesselring, Commander of the Italian South Zone, which condemns to death "whoever takes advantage of the food scarcity and withholds food destined for the population, or accepts or offers excessive prices." This Order comes into force forthwith.

A new appeal to Italian workers broadcast last night asked all Italian workers willing to enter the German Army in an auxiliary capacity, such as drivers, mechanics, hairdressers, shoemakers, cooks, interpreters, to report in Rome.—(Reuter.)

British Push Towards Naples

MAN-HANDLING guns and supplies over almost impassable mountain country, British units of the Fifth Army are steadily gnawing their way towards Naples.

Defence rings are being constructed hurriedly by the Germans around the city.

Just under 60 miles inland from the Salerno battle zone the Eighth Army, which "reappeared" yesterday with the capture of Potenza, after their whereabouts had been kept secret for days, are now driving north against only light opposition.

As the Eighth Army advances the small German "bulge" between Potenza and Salerno is being rapidly levelled off. The Germans are withdrawing rapidly to the north, pivoting on their right flank in the mountains above Salerno.

TOWNS FALL

More towns have fallen to the Fifth Army. They are San Cipriano, in the mountains, five miles north-east of Salerno, to the British; Montecorvina, Rovella, 12 miles east of Salerno, and Campagna, some 16 miles further south-west, to the Americans.

The Salerno plain is now cleared of the Germans, and smashed German tanks and guns litter the ground. Heavy casualties have been inflicted on them, and a large number of prisoners have been taken. A fair percentage are from German-controlled European countries.

Now the fighting has passed into the hills, where the Germans are firmly installed in good positions, with plenty of guns, mortars and machine-guns. The British forces are advancing in the general direction of Naples under heavy fire, and in face of many demolitions and mines.

The terrain is worse than anything the Allies encountered in Tunisia or Sicily, and is of great tactical value to the Germans, who are using the time thus won to lay an arc of defences on the southern and eastern sides of Naples.

North of Taranto, possibly in the Giota area, a small British force routed a larger German force in a short, sharp fight. They killed 50 of the Germans, took a number of prisoners, and destroyed a number of armoured vehicles

According to one report, the Allied line now runs from the hills north of Salerno roughly south-east on a jagged line through San Cipriano, Montecorvina, Rovella, Campagna, Castelcivita (25 miles south-east of Salerno), and Potenza.

TWIN DRIVE

A twin Allied drive to reach the vital road junction of Conturso, 18 miles inland from the Gulf of Salerno, was reported last night from Berlin. This road by-passes Naples through the Apennines, and leads to the road and rail nerve centre of Benevento, on the Vulturno river, along which, it has been suggested, the Germans may stand.

Behind the German lines at Benevento, north-east of Naples, Flying Fortresses dropped bombs on both ends of an important bridge over a river. Round this vital road and rail centre German road convoys were sighted in groups of up to 100 lorries. They were bombed and gunned day and night, and many were destroyed.—(Reuter.)

Radio Algiers said last night that the German line on the Salerno front has been folded back, and the German left flank now "faces to the south instead of to the west."

On this front the Germans face the combined strength of the Fifth and Eighth Armies.

U.S. Prediction of Alien Influx

Unless the immigration laws are tightened, America will be placed in the "gravest jeopardy," according to the Federal Grand Jury, which, predicting an unprecedented influx of aliens, yesterday, in New York, recommended the adoption of a system of "selective immigration" to exclude all except those considered likely to contribute to the country's welfare."—(A.P.)

Mr. W. Dwyer's Double

There was a huge attendance at Listowel for the opening day of the meeting. Followers of the money started badly when Glen of Hawthorn completely failed to realise expectations in the Castleisland Hurdle which Silver Fair won in comfortable style.

King of the Jungle had an easy victory in the County Plate, but there was plenty of excitement attached to the Feale Cup, as three of the runners—Bell Boy II., Border Knight, and Desmond Morgan—went the wrong course, and Brown Joker fell on the flat after passing the stands. The Cup was won by Nonna's Cottage after a good finish with Knight's Crest. Mr. Walter Dwyer followed up that success by piloting Kedra Cross to victory in the Limerick Plate.

Teams for Opening Rugby Matches

BY OUR RUGBY FOOTBALL CORRESPONDENT

THE Leinster Rugby season opens next Saturday with a programme of five matches, all the teams being engaged except the two Universities and Curragh Command. At this stage team changes are the principal source of interest, but Dublin players drop out of the public eye by slow degrees, so anything in the nature of "sensational" news is absent from a first glance over the sides selected for next Saturday.

To start with the Cup winners for the last four years, Old Belvedere, the only men who are unlikely to be seen out this season are S Henry and J. A. Byrne. Henry, last year's captain and Leinster interprovincial hooker, has been ill during the summer and may retire from the game. An extremely skilful hooker, but by no means a specialist, Henry will be missed; but in J. Belton Old Belvedere have a front-row forward who knows something about the difficult job of securing the ball from the set scrums.

Frank and Kevin Quinn will not be in action for three or four weeks, but they will be in their usual positions in the back division for the greater part of the season. N. McNelis also will be available shortly but, in the absence of Byrne, the scrum-half position may cause some trouble. J. Nugent, who has occasionally figured there in the past, will be in action on Saturday, but, if he fails to reach expectations, it is quite on the cards that Thorpe will be moved up from full-back to a post which he also has filled on the Leinster team. There are very useful deputies at full-back in McMahon and Keogh.

In fact Old Belvedere will be quite well equipped in reserve strength, for a promising centre, B. Dixon, who has had considerable senior experience with University College has joined, and T. Murphy, a forward who has won a couple of Cup medals, is returning to town after a couple of seasons' absence. I. O'Connor, the out-half on Saturday, was a member of the 2nd XV and has recently returned from England. The new front-row forward, K. Murphy, had one game on the senior team last season.

NEW BECTIVE CENTRE.

Bective Rangers, who meet Old Belvedere in their opening engagement, will be without K. Doyle on the wing, but he will be out later on, and, in the meantime, C. Walsh comes up from the 2nd team to fill the left-wing position. A new centre from the South, K. Barry, will be given a trial in this game, but otherwise the personnel will be as last season.

An attractive match at Lansdowne road should be Wanderers and St. Mary's. Contrary to rumour, A. B. Robertson will be filling his accustomed post in the centre for the home team, who will have W. F. Reid, from the 2nd, in C. Fox's place at scrum-half. An already strong pack will be strengthened by the return of W. McManaway from Belfast. St. Mary's will be almost exactly as last season, when they had a very compact and efficient side; on Saturday G. Norton will take his brother's place at full-back.

Clontarf have chosen precisely the same XV as that which played against Old Belvedere in the Cup last March for their game against Old Wesley at Castle avenue, but the visitors will be without F. L. Wolfe, temporarily and his place at scrum-half will be taken by A. Dumbleton. L. C Jacobson, the former Trinity hooker, will be an acquisition when he turns out. R. Wright and R. Christie are newcomers in the pack.

QUICK PROMOTION.

Lansdowne have taken the unusual step of bringing up a centre-three-quarter from the 3rd XV, A. O'Carroll, for their opening fixture against Monkstown at Sydney parade. M. O'Flanagan has apparently decided on Rugby instead of soccer on Saturday afternoons, and to fill P. J. Horan's place in the pack, C. Callan, a schools' interprovincial two seasons ago with Castleknock, is being given a chance.

After their poor record last season, Blackrock College have hopes of doing better this time, for their most dangerous back, T. Chamberlain, who was kept idle up to last Christmas, will be available this time from the start. J. Buckley, who has been on the University College, Cork, team for a couple of years, may add some badly-needed pep in the centre, and L. O'Brien, who had most of his Rugby with U.C.C. a year ago, is expected to be out regularly with Blackrock from now onwards. Palmerston are the visitors to Williamstown on Saturday.

Rises in Gold Shares

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

THE most interesting section on a generally quick London Stock market yesterday was South African gold shares, where renewed activity was responsible for some sharp rises and general strength.

Distinctly better results for the year ended March 31st last are produced by Low Temperature Carbonisation, Ltd. This company has for some years been producing oil and other products from coal. Its coalite production has become quite popular as household fuel. Its trading profit last year, after providing for a loss of one subsidiary, amounted to £164,798, against £131,787. With other income, the year's total was brought to £166,708, against £133,049. The report states that a loss amounting to £50,692 had to be provided for against a loss of one subsidiary. This loss, it is explained, was due to the undertaking being operated under Government direction. Ord. stockholders are to receive a 4 p.c. dividend for the year, against 3½ p.c. for the preceding three years. The 2/- Ord. units are quoted at 2/6.

There are times when Rs.10 shares of Indian Iron and Steel Co. gain much prominence in stock markets. Comparatively little has been heard of them of late, and they have a market price around 51/3. This concern now announces a further dividend of 15 p.c., or 1 rupee 8 annas per share for the year ended last March. Interim dividend for last year was reduced from 7½ to 5 p.c.

A statement from Hickson, Lloyd and King a Manchester firm of wholesale drapery warehousemen, announces a dividend for the year to June 30th last on the Ord. capital of 5 p.c., less tax, as in the previous two years. The company, which was registered in 1928, has an issued capital of £381,550, of which £256,550 is in Ord. shares of 10/- each, and the balance in 8 p.c. Cumulative Pref. The Ord. have a market price around 7/9.

An interim dividend of 7½ p.c., less tax announced by Smith's Potato Crisps, serves to draw attention to a business which has been highly successful over many years. For several years now the dividend has been a regular 27½ p.c., plus a cash bonus of 5 p.c. The 5/- units command 40/9 and on the 32½ p.c. distribution return about £3 19/- p.c., less tax.

A debit balance of £133,494 brought into accounts of Philco Radio Television Corporation for the year ended April 4th last has been reduced by the year's operations to £15,543. The chairman (Mr. L. D. Bennett), in a review issued with the accounts, states that this debit has been more than extinguished at this date. He also states that under normal circumstances the Ord. shareholders can look forward to the early resumption of dividends upon their holding. The last dividend was 25 p.c. in 1936. The 2/- Ord. shares have been an active market for some time and stand round 14/- each.

A pair of carved Chippendale dining chairs realised £31, and a Louis XV. gilt armchair was knocked down for £27. £28 was given for an antique mahogany scollop-edge wine table, and a satinwood display cabinet realised £23.

The bidding for the two Indian carpets and rugs resolved itself into a duel between two women, and the prices were £40 for the large carpet, £32 for the smaller one, and £17 for the rug.

Among the smaller articles of historical interest was a lace ruffle, alleged to have belonged to Oliver Cromwell, which was sold for 16s. A coat of arms of the Peace family, dated 1699, went for 15s.

In the collection of needlework pictures the highest price was £12 for a Stuart "stumpwork" picture. An intricately-worked map of Ireland was knocked down for £6.

The auctioneer was Mr. J. H. Allen, F.S.I., F.A.I. The sale will be continued to-day, when bronzes, oriental and decorative china and hangings will be among the lots.

Great Southern Rails Recover

TRADING was on a slightly reduced scale on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday, and markets presented a quieter appearance. The tone generally was steady to firm, and the outstanding feature was the strong buying of Great Southern Rails, which put prices again higher.

Home Government Funds were easier in places, and the Fourth National Loan and 4 p.c. Land Bonds shed fractions. 3½ p.c. War Loan closed a shade harder at 104½.

Banks inclined higher in places, and Nationals rose to 46/9, and Provincial Old advanced 1/- to 48/-, but Bank of Ireland Stock drooped to 337.

Guinness Ord., Power Deb., and Grand Canal Ord. all held up well.

Great Southern Rails were still to the fore and displayed renewed strength. The Pref. advanced a point to 22½, the Gtd. 25/- to 44, and the Deb. 25/- to 64.

Alliance Gas Ord. hardened to 22/3, and Burke Def. to 3/-, while Carroll Pref. rose to 27/9. Cement Ord. further improved to 45/3, and Ever Ready (Ireland) Pref. added several pence at 24/3.

J Halliday Pref. tended higher to 20/-, and Independent Pref. gained 1/- at 34/6. Irish Cinema issues came in sellers, and the Ord. gave way to 4/-, and the Pref. dipped to 19/10½.

B.A.T. Ord. relapsed 1/6 to 108/-, while Coats Ord. shaded off to 48/6, and Vickers Ord. to 19/3. Hawker Siddeley Ord. quoted 17/1½. Morris Motors 43/3, and Canadian Eagles 11/1½.

COMPANY MEETING.

FURNESS, WITHY & CO., LTD.

MERCHANT MARINE AND WAR

THE 52nd annual general meeting of Furness, Withy and Co., Ltd., was held yesterday in London.

The Right Hon. Lord Essendon, the Chairman, after stating that the position disclosed by the accounts was satisfactory, in view of existing conditions and heavy taxation liabilities, proceeded to deal with the question of nationalisation, and said:

"I am reluctant to revert to this subject, but it is one that is kept in the forefront of political controversy, and I consider that the adoption of such a policy would be so harmful to the national interest that those who feel strongly opposed to it should lose no opportunity of emphasising the faith that is within them. After the last war several nations attempted the nationalisation of shipping, but, without exception, they had to liquidate their position as a result of the heavy losses that were incurred. There is no reason to believe—in fact, quite the contrary—that the position would be any different if it became a British policy. It would not be an economical proposition.

"To sum up, what benefits are expected to accrue from nationalisation? Will it benefit the community? Will it benefit the domestic consumer or the industrial consumer? Will it increase productivity or add to the revenue of the State? Will it reduce taxation for the individual? I submit that the answer is in the negative.

Dealing with the unbalancing of the merchant navies of the world, owing to the large increase in United States tonnage, he said that the replacement problem of lost ships was seriously occupying the attention of British shipowners, as the moneys received would certainly not be sufficient for that purpose. There was also the greater problem arising in regard to the replacement of obsolete tonnage which had not been lost.

After making reference to the extraordinary general meeting which is called for October 8th to alter the memorandum of association in order to give the company power to carry on the business of air transport, he concluded with an expression of appreciation of the courage of the officers and merchant seamen in facing so bravely and unflinchingly the risks inevitable in times of war.

The report and accounts were unanimously adopted.

LORD ESSENDON'S DIAMOND JUBILEE.

Mr. S. J. Forster, proposing the re-election of the retiring directors, referred to the fact that Lord Essendon had just completed his diamond jubilee with the business. He said: "I am sure you will all join with me in tendering to our chairman to-day our heartiest congratulation on the attainment of his diamond jubilee with the business of Christopher Furness and Furness Withy and Co., Ltd. By his charming personality Lord Essendon always inspires true loyalty and genuine affection in those with whom he works. His unfailing kindliness, his freedom from prejudice, and his faculty of seeing the best in every man and of giving full consideration to the opinions of others, make business transactions with him a source of pleasure and satisfaction.

"It has been said that genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains. That being so, Lord Essendon is certainly a genius, as no business problem is too intricate for him to master or too small to merit his serious consideration. The phenomenal progress which has attended Lord Essendon's career has been entirely due to his own initiative, hard work and sterling character, culminating in honours bestowed upon him by H.M. the King, honours which were never more richly deserved."

Fianna Fail

The annual Ard-Fheis, or General Convention, of the Fianna Fail Party is an institution worthy of respect. Its programme includes a selection from some hundreds of motions which have been submitted by the party's clubs in every part of the twenty-six counties, and represents as interesting and thorough a cross-cut of public opinion as the letters in the Evening Mail. For next Tuesday's Convention 95 resolutions have been chosen out of a total of some 600. They range from the important and thoughtful to the mean and parochial. Various clubs can produce nothing better than a demand for more and bigger pensions. There is a demand for the official recognition of "The Soldier's Song" as the National Anthem, and for its compulsory performance after theatre and cinema programmes—as if the custom were not wellnigh universal. One club wants a ban on British coins; another desires to see the study of the Constitution added to the already over-loaded curriculum of the schools; a third seeks revenge on the National University's cavalier treatment of the Irish language; while another calls for the removal of public statues offensive to national sentiment and the reduction of Ministers' salaries. Yet we must admit that, side by side with this welter of illiberal and undignified motions, there exist many which indicate that the Fianna Fail Party is acquiring a breadth of vision with which we have not been ready to credit it at all times. There is, for example, a demand for the establishment of certain new Ministries—including a Ministry of Health. One Limerick club calls for a more rigid system of price control, while the rationing of all essential commodities in short supply is urged from Dun Laoghaire. Celbridge would have a Draining Bill; another Limerick club not merely declares itself against the growth of a monopoly in road transport, but also seeks a permanent system of parish councils. No great credit is due to the cumann that finds fault with the present means of election to the Senate, but that which urges the necessity of a post-war plan for social reconstruction and employment certainly is deserving of all praise.

Let us repeat that on the whole this programme indicates some lingering vitality in the Fianna Fail Party. It reveals that there are men in the organisation who are willing to think for themselves, and are reluctant to follow their leaders without question. The tragedy is that the spirit of dissatisfaction—call it what we will!—which is revealed in the motion before the Ard-Fheis finds no counterpart within the walls of Leinster House. The delegate to the Ard-Fheis has courage and liberty to say what is in his mind; the Fianna Fail T.D. possesses, or seems to possess, neither. He is a voting engine, without will or conscience of his own, an automaton that moves only when its master touches the switch. That is the first and obvious comment upon the Fianna Fail Party: its thoughts can rise to such a height, but no farther. It can express itself once a year, but its opinions count for nothing: they cannot be translated into action once its delegates have become deputies. The second comment is that those subjects which must weigh beyond all others upon the mind of every patriotic Irishman are taboo to the party. Its programme for next Tuesday shows that the party dares, directly or by inference, to protest against various conditions of life in Ireland; but no word is said about the major evils of our time. There is no protest, for example, against the dangerous growth—not so much in numbers as in power—of the Civil Service. There is no protest against the quiet and pernicious encroachment of legislation by decree, based on the vague, but terribly comprehensive, Emergency Powers that were granted to the Government four years ago without any stipulation by the Fianna Fail Party as to the use that could be made of these nebulous instruments. No word is spoken concerning the diminishing power of the Dail, or about the fact that it sits less and less frequently nowadays.

The Russian Front

Along a front of nine hundred miles—three times the length of Ireland—the Russians are continuing their great offensive. They seem to have three main objectives. In the far south they are moving towards Dnepropetrovsk, the great industrial city on the Dnieper, where they wrecked the famous dam two years ago; in the centre they are attacking Kiev, one of Russia's most historic cities, and a road, rail, and river junction of prime importance; and towards the north they are advancing towards Smolensk, on the railway line between Moscow and Brest-Litowsk, a city which figured largely in the history of Napoleon's Russian campaign. Yesterday the Soviet forces were reported to have captured no fewer than 1,000 inhabited places. Their advance columns are stated to be already within sight of Kiev; Roslavl, key to Minsk, and eventually to Brest-Litowsk, is in "imminent danger"; and Russian troops apparently are within about twenty miles of Dnepropetrovsk. Probably, the most important of these three objectives is Smolensk, although for sentimental, as well as for strategic reasons, the capture of Kiev would give a great fillip to Russian prestige. In the Smolensk area the Russian generals are reported to be operating a pincers movement, the most daring since the counter-offensive at Stalingrad; and there can be little doubt that they are taking the fullest advantage of the opportunities to accelerate the German retreat. The front is virtually stagnant between Leningrad and Vitebsk; but from the Dvina to the Sea of Azov fighting is continuous. Even in the Kuban area the Russians are active. The German front in this sector has been reduced to a length of less than twenty-six miles, and the bridge-head which was established at Novorossisk last year seems to be in immediate danger. Unless something like a miracle happens during the next week or so—and apparent miracles have happened more than once in the course of the present war—the Germans will be forced back to the Dnieper line before the onset of winter. Within the next few weeks the rains will make the Russian roads almost impassable. Doubtless, the German High Command has laid its plans in advance, and has prepared defensive positions along the Dnieper which will enable its armies to go into reasonably comfortable winter quarters; but it must be remembered that during the last two winters the Russians have managed to defy climatic conditions and have done much of their most remarkable offensive work when, according to the military text books, campaigning was impossible. In these circumstances, the immediate future in Russia is unpredictable. The military initiative seems to have passed definitely into Russian hands. Furthermore, Herr Hitler's generals are faced with the additional complication of another front on the European mainland; and Mr. Winston Churchill hinted broadly on Tuesday that yet another front may be established in the near future. It will be the fifth winter of the European war, and the third of the Russian campaign. Germany still is tremendously strong; but her armies, in spite of their spectacular successes, have been exposed to almost incredible hardships. At the moment it is quite impossible to assess the losses that have been sustained by the opposing forces in Russia. Both sides have been prodigal in their expenditure of men and material; both sides have paid a heavy price for their victories. The Russians are facing another winter with depleted resources, no doubt, but also with the encouragement that has been given to them by the course of events since the relief of Stalingrad. The Germans, on the other hand, still occupy vast expanses of Russian territory, and their powerful armies still are intact; but their flank is being threatened by the growing might of the Anglo-American Allies, only a fraction of whose forces hitherto has been deployed in Italy.

THE CHRISTIAN MINISTRY

IN the course of his sermon at the consecration of the Bishop of Killaloe at Christ Church Cathedral, Dublin, last Tuesday, Canon E. H. F. Campbell, M.A., recalled how the Christian Ministry gradually had developed. He said that the source of that service lay in great antiquity, bringing them back to New Testament times, for very early they found bishops in the Church of God. Many instances could be given to show how very strong were the foundations for the belief that the bishops were the successors of the apostles, with all the powers of the apostles to govern the Church in accordance with the divine law.

It was clear that up to the Reformation episcopacy was part of the Christian Ministry, and, in the Providence of God, it was possible for the Anglican Communion, of which the Church of Ireland was a part, to continue and present in the sixteenth century that form as part of her ministry.

Different Systems

The idea was current in their sister Church of England that there was something grevioualy wrong with her system of appointing bishops. The English bishop was, in the first instance, nominated by the Prime Minister, and the Chapter of his cathedral elected on the recommendation of the Crown. There was little precedent for that method in the order of the primitive Church, nor was there anything more of precedent in the system of the Roman Catholic Church, where the Pope in Rome appointed all bishops.

The Church of Ireland, together with some other branches of the Church Catholic, followed the custom of the early Church in electing their bishops at synods composed of clergy and laity, finally to be approved by the House of Bishops. It was a method not only true to the spirit of primitive order, but to the principles of the New Testament. The laity had a scriptural right to a voice in the Councils of the Church, and especially in the selection of their chief pastors.

METHODISM IN RATHMINES

"The curious name 'Neptune' was given to him because he was born at sea," states the Rev. R. Lee-Cole, M.A., B.D., concerning the Rev. Thomas Trevor Neptune Hull, in "Methodism in Rathmines," which he has written in connection with the jubilee of Charleston Road Methodist Church—1893 to 1943.

This publication gives the history of the first, second and third Methodist churches in the district. The Rev. T. T. Neptune Hull was the second minister of the second church.

The earliest chapel in Rathmines, built in 1801 at the Ranelagh end of Oakley road, was such a poor, small building that when it was sold it fetched only £25.

When Charleston road was opened up a site was taken nearer Rathmines (1854), and a new and handsome stone-built church was erected at a cost of £1,650 to seat 200 worshippers. Before many years it also was found to be too small, and a further church was planned for the new suburb of Rathgar, to which a considerable section of the Rathmines congregation was transferred.

The opening of the Brighton Road Church for a time relieved the pressure, but the growth of the neighbourhood and the further increase of the Rathmines congregation demanded a larger building, and in 1892-93 the present church was erected, and was dedicated on January 6th, 1893.

"SWEATED LABOUR"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES

SIR,—The article in your issue of the 22nd inst. under the above title has been brought to the attention of my Council.

I am requested to point out that, from the investigations and knowledge of my Council, the allegations as to payment of law clerks in Dublin are, generally speaking, without foundation; that the examples given by you are isolated instances, and that your general statements as to salaries paid are inaccurate.

As to managing clerks, many of them are paid substantial salaries, out of which some of them have been able to qualify either themselves or their sons as solicitors.

As to court clerks and typists, it is the experience of my Council that they are much better paid, work in much better conditions, and have shorter hours than similar classes of employees in commercial offices; and typists, in general, are anxious to obtain employment in solicitors' offices in preference to commercial offices.

Dublin solicitors are not "against any action for the union of the clerks." There is, in fact, an organisation of law clerks already in existence, founded upwards of 40 years ago.

May I also point out that legal business in Dublin has declined considerably owing to emergency conditions, and, consequently, in many cases, solicitors' offices are now over-staffed, although solicitors' incomes, in general, have greatly declined?

My Council consider that the salaries and conditions of employment in solicitors' offices compare favourably with the salaries and conditions obtaining in commercial enterprises in the city, not excluding newspapers; and that, in justice to Dublin solicitors, your journal should first have made a full inquiry into all the relevant facts, including the present average income of solicitors, before making an unwarranted and unfounded attack on them as a whole.—Yours, etc.,

BRENDAN T. WALSH, Hon. Sec.
The Dublin Solicitors' Bar Association, 4-5 Trinity street, Dublin.

DEATH.

SULLIVAN (Carrigrohane)—September 22, 1943, at his residence, Rosanna, Lee road, Cork, Daniel F. Sullivan, at an advanced age. Deeply regretted. R.I.P. Funeral (private) on to-morrow (Friday), after 10 o'clock Mass at Cathedral, to St. Finbarr's Cemetery.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

THE Board of Trade has given an assurance to the National Federation of Merchant Tailors that there will be full protection in the tailoring trade for all women over 36 and men over 41. These workers are not to be "called up," and the trade will thus be assured of their services until the end of the war. For several months the labour problem has been the great difficulty in the clothing business, and Mr. Thomas Dowell of Liverpool, who employs seventy operatives, declares that if half the time and effort taken by the Government in its "tremendous agitation" over the clothing restrictions had been directed by getting down to something tangible about labour, the craft would be in a much better position than it is now. "Everyone realises how workmanship has deteriorated," he told me to-day, "and nothing will save the craft unless first-class workmen are forthcoming at once. No mother will apprentice her son for a few shillings a week to the tailoring trade now, and the apprenticeship laws are obsolete."

The Film Quota

Something like a panic has taken hold of the heads of English film-producing companies since Mr. Brendan Bracken, the outspoken British Minister of Information, said in New York two weeks ago that he favoured the principle of unrestricted competition, with freedom from quotas in the film market, while at the same time strongly recommending collaboration between the British and American film industries. "The companies hear fear that this foreshadows a change in Government policy towards British films," an official of the Daily Film Renter told me to-day. "In this policy the quota of 15 per cent. for British pictures is the lynch pin." A deputation from the trade is shortly to see Mr. Bracken, and they hope that his speech has been misinterpreted.

Timber Houses

Immediately that the war ends some four million new houses will be needed throughout Great Britain, and it is likely that a certain percentage will be built of timber. Contrary to the popular belief, the risk of fire in timber houses is not appreciably greater than in brick or other houses containing timber floors and rafters. In the great Becontree London County Council estate prefabricated timber houses, which form a small percentage of the total number on the estate, were among the few houses on the estate with which the Council has not experienced trouble, and their average annual maintenance cost has proved to be one-third less than for brick, mainly because of the very considerable thermal insulation provided in the timber homes. Many hundreds of houses of solid cedar in the Dundee area have been built at a cost of £352 for the three-roomed single-storey type.

Cheaper Rural Life

If Mr. Ernest Bevin has his way the carriage of goods on the railways would be on a Post Office system—the cost of sending an article from London to Aberdeen would be the same as the charge from London to Essex. In Scotland, Mr. Tom Johnston, M.P., Secretary of State, has successfully introduced such a principle, with immeasurable advantage to people living in remote districts, such as the Highlands. He has now over fifty food commodities with a uniform retail price in every district, and many agricultural commodities, like basic slag and sulphate of ammonia, with a uniform price at the nearest railway station. For sea-borne coal he has fixed a maximum charge of 15/- a ton, so that many rural districts are no longer adversely affected by heavier transport charges.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Licensing Laws

I listened to a conversation on the subject of the licensing laws, and learnt to my interest and edification that public-houses and clubs are assessed for their licences on a different system. The public-house pays according to its poor-law valuation, while the club pays a fixed proportion in its turn-over—in effect, on its purchases. Threepence in the pound was the figure mentioned.

The thought came to me that a small club might evade quite a lot of its liability by purchasing its stocks quietly from a publican for cash. But please do not accuse me of putting ideas into anybody's head.

It was news to me also that Leinster House—where the consumption of liquor is certainly not negligible — does not possess a licence. What, I wonder, is the statutory authority, if any, for this exemption of our legislators? Or am I misinformed?

"Castlerosse"

To many people the news of the death of the Earl of Kenmare meant nothing until they had realised that Kenmare was the man they had known for many years, by reputation, as Lord Castlerosse. Shorn of titles his name was Valentine Browne, the same as that of the seventeenth century baronet who received a grant from the Crown of "the Lakes of Killarney, with all the islands of or in the same, and the fisheries of the said lakes and the soil and bottom thereof."

Out of twelve successive heads of the family he was the ninth to be baptised Valentine.

Henry Longhurst, the golfer, once described him as a man who talked, wrote, ate, drank, and generally had his being on a large scale. To write that a man drinks in a big way normally entails a writ for libel. In the case of Castlerosse, said Longhurst, it was a compliment.

He did not call, as little men call, for a small whiskey or a large whiskey. He called for a whiskey. And woe betide the waiter who did not bring a pint tumbler. It was an impressive spectacle to see him lower a tumbler of whiskey and soda in a single draught and wave imperiously for another.

Riviera Challenge

It has been said that Castlerosse's introduction to journalism was a lucky chance. He was with Lord Beaverbrook at Monte Carlo, and the proprietor of the Daily Express had written an article for his paper. Castlerosse thought very little of the article, and said that he could do better himself. He was challenged to try, and the result was so satisfactory that he was appointed to write the "Londoner's Log," at £5,000 a year.

The now famous Killarney golf course had its origin in a visit paid to Lord Castlerosse's home by Henry Longhurst. "Do you think we could make a golf course here?" asked Castlerosse. "We could make the loveliest golf course in the whole world," replied Longhurst; so they wired for Sir Guy Campbell, the golf architect.

When Sir Guy arrived he was given a free hand, and as he surveyed the two hundred acres of deer-cropped, rolling parkland that was to be turned into a course he exclaimed: "This is the most exciting thing I have ever done."

Hamilton White, who took charge of the construction of the course, said: "I have made golf courses in England and Scotland, and almost every country in Europe, but Killarney is queen of them all."

Brighter Dublin

As I was going the other day to meet a friend, who had returned to Dublin after long absence, I wondered what change in our city would strike him most, and whether it would be the substitution of 'buses for trams, the fewness of motor cars, the return of the horse, or our hideous air-raid shelters.

It was none of these, however, but just the remarkable clearness of the air, and the splendid, sharply-defined views of our streets as seen from O'Connell Bridge, and other points of vantage. They reminded him of some northern continental city.

I explained the matter as a by-product of the coal shortage, but it would be interesting to know whether the freedom from smoke has had any marked effect upon the incidence of disease in our midst as compared with pre-war years.

QUIDNUNC.

LORD KENMARE'S PLANS FOR KILLARNEY

A few weeks ago the late Lord Kenmare was planning for Killarney a "holiday village," which would attract thousands of organised tourists from the English and American professional classes. Breath-taking masses of flowers on his vast golf course were to rival in colour the magnolia season at Charleston, United States. The weather bogey was to be defeated by every form of indoor amusement. Mr. W. Butlin, the English organiser of holiday camps, told him that he could send 500 organised holiday-makers the first year and 1,000 the next for an 18 weeks' holiday period, guaranteeing the scheme financially.

Lord Kenmare held the view that with the loss of the agricultural export trade and the end of emigration, the tourist industry was Ireland's only post-war hope; but the day of the casual tourist was over.

Yesterday he was to have discussed his plans for Killarney with representatives of the National Planning Conference.

NEW GAELIC OPERA

A Gaelic opera with music by Eamonn Gallagher is to be one of the big features of the Oireachtas, which is to begin on October 23rd. Its libretto is based on an ancient story of the burning of Tara, and it will introduce many of the characters of the Fianna legends. As the subject lends itself to spectacular production it is expected to be one of the high lights of the week's programme. The music is said to be up to the very high standard which Mr. Gallagher has set himself, and the libretto is also said to be very good.

During that week the Abbey Theatre is to produce a new Gaelic play, Ordóg an Bháis," which may be freely translated—"The Dead Hand," a play of rural life in County Clare, in three acts.

RELIGIOUS TEACHING IN BELFAST SCHOOL

In the Northern Senate, on Tuesday, Mr. Cunningham asked whether the Minister of Education was aware that 301 children out of 307 attending St. Joseph's School, York road, Belfast, were being taught by Roman Catholic teachers, and would he arrange for those children to be given religious instruction by Protestant teachers.

Professor Corkey, replying, said that the position was as stated. The power of appointing teachers to voluntary schools, such as St. Joseph's, rested with the manager, and the Ministry had no power to require that they should be of any particular religious denomination. The manager, however, was obliged by the Ministry's regulations to allow those clergymen, teachers and other persons to whom the parents would not object, to have access to the children to give them religious instruction. The Ministry had informed him that that obligation was being discharged to the fullest extent to which applications for such access had been made.

CIVIL SERVANTS' GRIEVANCES

"The whole field of previous negotiations was surveyed in detail, and the Minister indicated that he would examine sympathetically the points placed before him, and make known his decision as soon as possible," says a statement issued yesterday evening by the Civil Service Alliance, after a deputation from that body waited on Mr. Sean T. O'Kelly, Minister for Finance, at Government Buildings yesterday.

It is understood that matters brought before the Minister included wage rates, bonuses, cost of living and various conditions of service.
